CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 9.—The line-up today for Brooklyn is: Olson, shortstop; J. Johnson, third base; Griffith, right field; Wheat, left field; Myers, center field; Konechey, first base; Kilduff, second base; Miller, catcher; Cadore, pitcher.

Cleveland: Jamieson, left field; Wambegans, second base; Speaker, center field; Smith, right field; Gardner, third base; W. Johnson, first base; Sewell, shortstop; O'Neill, catcher; Coveleskie, pitcher.

Sunrise at League park today found Edward Fox, of Proctor, Vermont, holding first place in a line of several hundred persons awaiting the sale of 9000 general admission tickets. He took his station at 2 o'clock yesterday carrying a large box, which, he said, contained his supper, midnight lunch, breakfast and lunch for today. Fox, who came all the way from Seattle, Washington, to see the game, glanced at the rapidly growing line behind him. "That's the only system," he said. "The early bird catches the ticket."

Fourth in the line was Miss Julia Kelly of Bridgeport, Connecticut.

Mayor Fitzgerald issued an official proclamation for everybody to go out and root today for Speaker and his men. All factory whistles blew at noon and flags were flown from where flags never flew before. Hundreds stood in line all night to get into unreserved seats. Speculators sold seats in the reserved stands for $30 apiece and there were those who bid higher for them when the supply ran out. The crowd was good-natured and came prepared with cowbells and horns to make a racket.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 9.—With the close of the local American Association season here, it is stated that attendance in St. Paul at Lexington park greatly exceeded that of any previous year, although figures were not made available. The stadium apparently had the pennant won almost from the start, and the whole marginal end they held seemed a spur to attendance rather than a drawback.

BOOTLEGGING IS BEING PROBED

(By Associated Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—An admission that Harry Brodski, former mayor of Redondo Beach, California, and now a broker in this city, is under investigation in connection with what he terms a "gigantic bootlegging ring," was made today by United States District Attorney Frank Silva. He added that his office is investigating reports that Loren Handley, former probation officer of California, came to his death in an automobile accident through foul play.

FRED WILBERG FOUND GUILTY

"We, the jury in the above-mentioned case, find the defendant, Fred Wilberg, guilty of murder in the first degree and direct that he shall be punished by confinement in the state prison for life." Thus ended the trial of the case of the state of Nevada against Fred Wilberg, charged with the murder of Dixie Miller, an entertainer in a local dance hall, on August 25. The sentencing of Wilberg has been set for October 12.

It will be remembered that Wilberg shot Dixie Miller in Blake's cabaret where she had run from the street to escape him. He claimed that he was drunk at the time and that she had stolen $30 from him, but the evidence pointed to the fact that the shooting was done in cold blood, at least one of the witnesses testifying that she had her hands up begging for mercy when he shot her.

REGISTER TODAY OR ON MONDAY

Next Tuesday, October 12, will be Columbus day, and is a legal holiday in Nevada. Banks of this city will be closed on that day, and most of the county offices will likewise remain closed. October 12 is the last date under the law on which voters can register for the general election, but the fact that it is a legal holiday will make Monday the last day for registration. All voters who have not yet registered should do so either today or Monday to insure their right to cast their ballots in the general election.

Tonopah Turns Out En Masse To Hear Candidates for Senator and Representative Speak

Before a crowd that packed the Ardome to its doors, Hon. Tasker L. Oddie, Republican candidate for United States senator, and Hon. Samuel S. Arentz, Republican candidate for representative, last evening made their appeal for support in the coming election. The crowd was rather late in arriving, the Ardome being only about three-fourth filled when Attorney Hugh Henry Brown opened the meeting, but before he had finished his talk, seats were at a premium.

The outstanding feature of the meeting was the impression of absolute sincerity and honesty left by both the candidates. In both their talks their desire to represent Nevada as the servants of the people of this state was evident. Both were frequently interrupted by applause from the audience and by assurances of support in the election. Both made mainly straight-from-the-shoulder speeches which won the approval of the large audience. They dodged no issues and both evidenced their desire to win in the election, not for the personal honor it means but because they feel that they can be of service to Nevada.

In opening his speech Mr. Oddie spoke of his early recollections of Tonopah and paid a high tribute to the progressiveness and energy of the pioneers of this camp. He then took up the subject of a protective tariff showing that Senator Chamberlain of Washington and Senator Henderson of this state, both seeking reelection, are promising that they will favor protection of American industries by a tariff but that this was impracticable inasmuch as both of them being Democrats, they would be hampered by the Congress of their party and that the other Democrats in the senate would overrule their objections and use party pressure on them to force them into line on any tariff bill which the Democrats might propose. He pointed out how the Republican party had always stood for protection and the Democrats against it. He then applied the principle of protection to specific instances, mentioning a tungsten property which he was developing in Mineral county and which had to be closed down because tungsten from China, mined by coolie labor, could be imported into this country cheaper than the mineral could be produced here. He drew applause from the audience by his statement that he "did not want to see American labor working at the same wages and under the same conditions as Chinese coolie labor." Other minerals were then taken up and the need of protection shown. He then showed the inter-relationship of the mining, agricultural and livestock industry in this state, and pointed out how all of these needed protection. The packers and the big interests, he asserted, no longer want a protective tariff for they can produce meat products cheaper in foreign countries, and import them, selling them at as high a price as if they were produced here. His statement that "protection today means the protection of American labor against the cheap labor of foreign countries" drew applause from the audience.

"I don't like the league of nations," he stated, "I believe in constitutional and representative government," he stated, pointing out how as a member of the league the question of Japanese exclusion would be decided by the assembly composed mainly of representatives of European and Asiatic countries. He pointed out that under the league a labor board of 124 members was provided and only four of these were to be Americans. He asserted that the tendency of this board would be to pull American labor down to the standards of foreign labor and he went on record as directly opposed to that proposition.

He closed with a high tribute to Samuel S. Arentz, mining engineer, rancher, and typical Nevadan, who, through his knowledge of the west, would immediately be given a place on those committees of congress which deal with western problems. Mr. Arentz made a hit with the crowd as soon as he began his speech. He compared this government with a large business institution and the senators and representatives as managing directors. He appealed for the support of the audience in the election because of his knowledge of the affairs of Nevada, and because he knew the viewpoint of labor and the viewpoint of the employer. He told how he had worked in the mines throughout the west and asked for the votes of labor. He mentioned the mining industry and some of the handicaps under which it was working at present, putting himself on record as favoring revision of these handicaps so that the industry could be run on a profitable basis. Mr. Arentz then turned to the ex-servicemen and paid a high tribute to them stating that he favored equitable legislation which would take the form of a long-time loan for those who wished to develop property which they own. He mentioned a "Kono boy," deaf and dumb through shell shock, and urged legislation which would care for those disabled in the war.

"The national capital has forgotten that it is subject to the national will," said Mr. Arentz, in opening his attack on the arrogance of President Wilson and Mr. Wilson's refusal to consult with the two houses of congress. He then spoke of the unrest in the United States and drew prolonged applause by his statement that "if the only thing the Republic can party does after next March is to settle that unrest, it will be the biggest thing that has ever been accomplished in this country." He closed by pointing out the importance of this election and appealed to the voters to cast their ballots for the Republican ticket if they wanted the next four years to be years of peace and prosperity.

Attorney Hugh Henry Brown opened the meeting with a brilliant address on the issues of the campaign. He pointed out the essential differences between the Republican and Democratic parties and showed why he felt that voters this year should cast their ballots for the Harding and Coolidge ticket. He drew roars of laughter from the crowd when he played the administration for its extravagance in such things as buying six or seven curriculums for each horse it owned during the war and for purchasing many thousands of sets of harness for motorized ambulances. He paid a high tribute to Warren G. Harding and to Calvin Coolidge and mentioned their selection at the Chicago convention, at which he was in attendance.

Before the meeting the band played in the streets and red fire was burned. It then led the way to the Ardome and several pieces were rendered before the speeches were started. After the meeting dancing was enjoyed by a large crowd until a late hour.

The crowd that attended deserves more than passing mention. Enthusiasm for the Republican national ticket and for Mr. Oddie for senator and Mr. Arentz for representative was evident everywhere. It was one of the largest crowds that has ever attended a political meeting in this city and its frequent applause of the speakers showed that they stood high in its favor. The crowd was truly representative of Tonopah. In it were mine operators, miners, merchants, lawyers and representatives of practically every business in the community, and if the enthusiasm shown is a true indication, Tasker L. Oddie and Samuel S. Arentz are going to poll an enormous vote here along with Warren G. Harding and Calvin Coolidge in the November election.
